

CignaLinks

Quick reference guide

What is CignaLinks?

The CignaLinks® program integrates global health care coverage with local administrative services and provider networks to deliver:

- › Convenient access to quality care
- › Reduced out-of-pocket expenses
- › Local claims processing
- › Simplified administration
- › Local regulation compliance for certain regions

How does the CignaLinks program work?

CignaLinks partners receive eligibility data for all eligible customers in their country or region.¹ Participation in a CignaLinks program is based on the elected medical coverage, work location and/or citizenship of the employee. It is possible for an employee to be eligible for more than one CignaLinks program. For example, someone with a work location of Hong Kong and a citizenship of Brazil would be eligible for both the CignaLinks Hong Kong and CignaLinks Brazil programs. For this reason, it is very important for Cigna to have accurate work location and citizenship data for all employees, as well as dependents on assignment at all times. If an employee's work location changes, Cigna should be notified immediately.

When seeking health care services in one of the CignaLinks countries, customers simply present their CignaLinks ID card (which may be a separate or co-branded card) to the participating health care provider or facility at the time of service. Customers should use their Cigna global ID card anywhere outside the specified CignaLinks region.

Where are separate ID cards issued?

Customers who are eligible for a CignaLinks program will receive a Cigna global ID card and potentially one or more additional ID cards, depending on their citizenship and/or work location. Refer to the table below to review details per country or region.
